

By joining MUST, members agree to respect the values and the principles listed below. Reciprocally, the association commits to doing its best to ensure their application.

Fight against discrimination

Homophobia, transphobia, sexism, racism and all other forms of discrimination have no place within the association. MUST's purpose is to create a space where everyone can feel confident practicing their sport. Therefore, unsolicited remarks on other people's body or appearance are not allowed.

Respect each other's identity

A good practice is to pay attention to the way each person genders themselves and respect the pronoun they use. In gendered spaces, it is left to each person to choose their changing room, shower or toilet, ensuring everyone's privacy. MUST is also a signatory to the Sports et Trans charter and is committed to facilitating any changes in its records as soon as possible and without conditions.

Guarantee the inclusion of everyone regardless of their level

Beginners should not feel excluded, while allowing more experienced people to thrive in their sport. A balance between performance and inclusion has to be found in the sessions, for example by keeping some training times for mixed levels and others for a more uniform group practice.

Encourage solidarity and mutual support among its members, on and off the fields. MUST has to be accessible regardless of one's financial means.

Respect the commitment of the association

MUST is a non-profit organization made up of volunteers. As such, everyone's commitment must be encouraged and respected, regardless of their level. MUST is not a business and any attitude of hierarchical domination or intimidation is prohibited.

Consent is important

MUST can be a space to meet people, however it is always important to respect people's consent and boundaries.

Promote the commitments and values of MUST. Whether it be in sports, parties, or competitions. MUST can associate with any organization or structure defending the same values.

Promote these inclusive practices in its communication, including on digital media: Whatsapp groups, Facebook and other social networks associated with MUST. All members are expected to take seriously any discriminatory remarks or attitudes, giving everyone the opportunity to learn and to apologize. Serious or repeated acts must be reported to the person in charge of the relevant section or to the association's board of management.
